

THE NEW YORKER

25 WEST 43RD STREET
NEW YORK, N. Y. 10036

EDITORIAL OFFICES

(212) 840-3700

March 8, 1979

Dear Dr. Lederberg,

I am now putting together the articles about Mars that appeared in The New Yorker as a book. Jeremy Bernstein (who interviewed you for the magazine last fall) pointed out that the article never conveyed your later opinions on the question of life on Mars -- a serious omission, he felt! -- and I'd like to rectify that omission now. Could I talk with you sometime, either on the telephone or in your office? I shouldn't need too much time. ✓

I'm looking forward to Dr. Levinthal's film next week.

Sincerely,

Henry S. F. Cooper, Jr. ↓

Saw him at film.

~~Telephone~~ ☐

~~office visit~~ ☐